

Introduction

Register: informal

Famous all over world, good reputation, Symbol of the country.

Seldom do I find the time these days to zone out in front of the goggle-box. However, on these rare ~~moments~~^{occasions} when I do, I like to tune into BBC 1. The British Broadcasting Corporation's flagship channel...

Types of programs

Lots of types. Drama, comedy, chat shows, current affairs, reality TV. Were I to sum up the output of BBC 1 in one word it would be variety.

A smorgasbord of viewing options ranging from... to... newsbiting drama, side-splitting comedies, up-to-the-minute current affairs shows. Plenty to keep a couch potato entertained. Standard of Broadcast good quality, sometimes looks a bit cheap, daytime shows bad high quality programs top-notch shows. By and large/ On the whole the channels programs are top-notch especially such shows as... and... On the other hand it's being a state fund channel with no advertising revenues, some of the daytime shows can be a bit tacky. For example...

which people it appeals to Children in morning/afternoon, families in evening, adults after 9. what really stands out about BBC 1 is the fact that it caters for such a wide demographic. There really is something for everyone, from cartoons for the tots to regular news bulletins as well as soaps, game shows and quality drama.

How it compares to others It covers all the bases

Shows look a bit cheap compared to American ones, better than other free TV channels, no ads.

The more HBO shows I watch the ~~cheaper~~ shabbier some BBC shows look but generally speaking they hold up well in comparison. Can't compete with the commercial giants sets a benchmark for state funded TV channels